

Sydney Yund

RED

Water has no color

so when I dip my hands in the lake

it takes on the color of a scarlet heart

shattered into a million dead pieces.

My face remains,

because not even the color of crimson can hide it:

The face of a man with guilt

but not regret.